GRANBURY

Long known for celebrating its past, Granbury is now more focused on the present. The historic town square, the first in Texas to be named to the National Register of Historic Places, is filled with shops, galleries, and restaurants that wouldn't be out of place in bigger cities, such as Dallas or Fort Worth. But unlike its urban neighbors to the north, Granbury's streets are traffic-free and the stars shine brightly overhead. Stress is seldom seen and most visitors leave feeling energized.

What you find in Granbury are amazing meals, scenic views, and seemingly endless activities to keep your family entertained. There are restaurants for every taste, plus a nearby brewery, and three local wineries. There's even an artisanal cheesemaker to complement your Cabernets and Chardonnays before you lead your family on an extraordinary adventure. Local events range from the renowned Granbury Wine Walk in April and the Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts in October, to eclectic and family friendly gatherings. For nature lovers, Lake Granbury offers hours of fun, including boating, fishing, and water sports. Plan your getaway today at visitgranbury.com.
